Vassiliea Stylianidou aka Franck-Lee Alli-Tis works as a video and installation artist, using in her* works related artistic media such as text, sound/voice/music and performance. Her* artistic process involves a constant renegotiation of public and private history, as well as public and private spaces.

The work explores systems of control and discipline such as language, architecture, body, labour, family, and gender. Especially in relation to language, s*he is interested in ways of using it that challenge and subvert its everyday use in an attempt to suggest new paradigms for knowledge, experience and connection. In her* video and installation work, s*he employs texts that take on a subversive and poetic form opening up a dialogue with contemporary political and queer-feminist theory, as well as with elements from current news items. Stylianidou also explores the interconnections between, on the one hand, language and, on the other, the voice, the body and the image as rhythm and materiality. S*he employs elements from the genre of the spoken word as well as from experimental and underground music and poetry movements.

The exacerbation of the global sociopolitical, economic and climate crisis, lends renewed relevance to the question of “How can art pave new paths for thought and put new artistic practices to the test?”

Since 2012 Stylianidou started a series of textile- and text based installations in which s*he makes use of textile, texts, voice and rhythm/music. In this series of works-in-progress Stylianidou investigates the relation of poetic and artistic thought with the reality of (artistic) labour and economy. In 2011 s*he founded the collaborative format STUDIOvisits Berlin (2011-2015). Since 2018 s*he is co-curator of the queer-feminist film festival Aphrodite*. In 2019 s*he initiated the on-going collective project WordMord which explores the relation between language, violence, trauma and technology. WordMord's initial research group: Franck-Lee Alli-Tis aka Vassiliea Stylianidou, Aggeliki Diakrousi, Christina Karagianni, Oyto Arognos aka Stylianos Benetos, Mounologies: Anna Delimpasi, Eleni-Claire Diamantouli.
